I am a retired business owner who relocated to Erath county to raise my sons in a rural lifestyle in a beautiful landscape. One of my prime objectives for moving to Erath county was to get away from the congested and cold landscape of the DFW metroplex area.

I worked long hours under very tedious conditions, saving what I could while raising six sons, and invested what I could in the a small ranch

Now, Lone Star Transmission and the Texas Public Utility Commission wants to bulid a high voltage unsightly power line across one end of my property.

I know we need energy sources, but the transmission line could and should be built on the alternate route to the south

If you take the northern route through Erath County, you will destroy beautiful landscape which can not be replaced.

If you take the alternate southern route, there is less scenic landscape, cost can be reduced by the lower land cost on the southern route; and constrution cost can be reduced due to the more even terrain.
