That could be enough to raise prices moderately without sending shock waves through shaky world economies.

Mitchell does not dispute the charges.

"We did accrue those charges, but the biggest thing is, how does a governing body misplace $300,000 worth of billing?" he said.

Mitchell said he has not received a formal response from Mustang.

While he declined to comment on the letter, Boyd said Mustang officials were analyzing their finances month by month for the time period in

"We will basically issue a makeup bill; the invoice amount will correlate directly to stipulations in the contract," Boyd said. "It's a clerical error and billing error on our part, certainly. We have taken immediate steps to correct any formulas within our spreadsheets and the billing system that create those invoices."

Districts discuss payment problems

07:21 AM CDT on Wednesday, March 18, 2009

By BJ Lewis / Staff Writer

Representatives from Denton County Fresh Water Supply District No. 9 claim they have not been paid by the Mustang Special Utility District since December. Tuesday, on the advice of their attorney, District No. 9 brought those concerns to Mustang's finance committee.

District No. 9 representatives John Mitchell, president, and Clint Shipp, director, attended the meeting.

While there was no set item for public discussion on Mustang's agenda, officials from District No. 9 had been invited to address the committee.

Mitchell read aloud parts of a letter addressed to Mustang's board of directors.

The last payment to District No. 9 was received in early February for the December customer receipts. Mustang has not remitted collections for the months of January or February 2009, the letter stated.

~~"In light of the serious nature of this problem, we have been forced to seek the advice of our financial and legal consultants as to how we might best protect [District No. 9] and its residents from these continuing financial problems,"~~ the letter stated.

According to District No. 9's accountant, payments have been late for years. But this time, payment is "really late," Mitchell said.

Chris Boyd, Mustang's general manager, quickly commented that the statements in the letter were false.

"They were paid on Jan. 30, both credit cards and regular disbursement," he said.

Mustang is two weeks behind payments because of the "departure" of some of its finance staff, Boyd added.

District No. 9 and Mustang already have financial issues stemming from the fresh water supply district being underbilled by Mustang for many months and dealing with a corrected bill of a little more than $119,000.

Mustang, which delivers water to District No. 9's customers through its pipeline, remits payments from those customers to District No. 9, but it also charges District No. 9 for use of its pipeline.

Mustang officials have said they are analyzing their records to make sure the correct amount is billed and the oversight does not happen again.

When asked by Randy Wallace, secretary-treasurer of the Mustang board, if he was comfortable with Mustang meeting contractual payment requirements, Boyd said he was.
